Some of the major challenges ahead of us like- Should R&D organizations continue their discreet efforts to find the solution on their own and rely solely on in-house expertise? Can the R&D organizations still be able to counter it individually when the threat is of a global scale? And if a company comes up with innovative solution, how will that solution be stopped from becoming a proprietary item protected by exclusive rights? Should we revisit and or reform our mechanisms for protecting intellectual property rights? Is there any alternative approach that can add much more versatility and transparency to R&D to these corporate R&D organizations?" He also concluded his speech by pointing out the

Summary of the Speech:

The mental health and well-being of students are crucial aspects that impact their academic performance and overall quality of life. It's important for educational institutions to prioritize providing support services, promoting a positive learning environment, and fostering open discussions about mental health. Students should be encouraged to seek help when needed, and schools can offer resources such as counseling services, workshops, and stress management programs. Regular check-ins and awareness campaigns can contribute to creating a campus culture that values mental health.

Over the past few months, the normal life cycle of people around the world has changed dramatically. This sudden change has affected people's mental health. Various mental difficulties such as mental exhaustion, anxiety, worry have engulfed the human mind. The current new generation is no exception. There are various reasons for the deterioration of human mental health.
