Introduction

The constituent assembly must be viewed in the context of the entire process of making a new constitution. In some countries it has been in charge of the entire process, but in others it has shared the task with other institutions, including giving the force of law to the constitution. Therefore when the decision to have a constituent assembly is made, it is important to focus on its relationship to other aspects of the constitution making process, even the fundamental question of how to initiate the reform process and to develop a consensus on institutions and methods. This paper therefore is not only about the mechanics of a constituent assembly, but also the context in which it operates and its connections to state, society and other processes.

The Election Commission of India can be regarded as a constitutional body that was established by the Indian constitution to carry out as well as regulate elections within the country. Article 324 under the constitution states that direction, superintendence, state legislature, control of elections for the parliament, the office of India's president, and control of parliament elections shall be controlled by the Election Commission. Hence, the Election Commission of India is defined as a body that is present all over India in the sense that it is common to state government as well as Central government.

CONCLUSION

Every constitution is important to its country. The Indian constitution is one of the most flexible and tolerant constitutions written, given the diversity of the country. The constitutional assembly and making of the constitution lay down the moral, political, social, and humanitarian premise on which India as a country should roll.

The election commission of India acts as a guiding body, controlling elections throughout the country. The topic of the election commission of India is vital in the subject of Legal Reasoning and should not be ignored. The topic of the election commission of India has been further discussed through assessment of the structure of the election commission of India, the function of the election commission of India, and the election commission of India identity card.
